ABOUT THE PROGRAMME

One of the most important jobs of an accountant is developing reports for the management and executives. This is where modern accounting technology really shines; computers can do analysis in seconds that once took highly skilled accountants weeks of research and crunching. Reports of any kind can be produced with the push of a button and a quick snap-shot of the transactions and cash flow are revealed. All kinds of reports are needed to gauge the company's success:

All of these reports give a picture of what the company is doing and where it is headed. They can help to decide if the company is financially stable and if there are any adjustments to be made in the strategies for operation. These reports are good for the investors also. They are able to see if a company is worth investing in.
